

Urovant Community Guidelines

Urovant Sciences is committed to creating innovative and responsive ways to support and educate the community. We have created a space online that is meant to be safe, informational and engaging for patients, healthcare providers, caregivers, employees, job seekers, investors and media. Our goal is to create conversations and share resources among these audiences, and to share resources with the people who need them. It is also our priority to remain accurate, honest and transparent with the information we share and engage with online. These community engagement guidelines apply to each of our online assets – Twitter, Instagram, LinkedIn and Glassdoor – and govern our rules and regulations for engagement on those channels. If you are a patient in need of relief, a caregiver looking for information, a job seeker looking to join the Urovant Sciences team or anyone interested in a joining a community of OAB advocates, we welcome you. By choosing to join our community you are agreeing to abide by the following community engagement guidelines.

I. Be Respectful

We have created safe spaces online for patients to get help and information on difficult topics. Please be respectful of everyone in our online community.

II. Stay on Topic

Information is a valuable resource to help patients seek critical care, stakeholders stay up to date on important news and information, and current and future employees stay connected to Urovant Sciences. Please remain on topic in relation to what we are discussing. If you have a question or comment that is off topic, such as an inquiry around a specific product, therapy, business opportunity or sponsorship, please contact us.

III. Adhere to Legal and Regulatory Guidance

Urovant Sciences is a public company in a highly regulated industry and subject to specific rules surrounding how we can communicate with the public. Because of this, we may not be able to always address your comments or questions directly on our channels.
